The Owasco was bound for Montreal from Philadelphia with a cargo of coal. Capt. Alonzo Carter says he had fair weather up to Tuesday, when a blow was encountered and Tuesday, when a blow was encountered and Tuesday.

"It is the duty of every woman to make the work of those who labor for the home as light as possible," said Mrs. Ormsby. "I know of no better way than by cutting down the prices of necessary articles. Let us not cut off the counters, but light for a lower tarif, which means lower prices."

Mrs. E. J. Cadwallader and Mrs. Elizabeth Remington led in three encers for Mrs. Ormsby that were given with a will.

The following letter was prepared, and the Inluence Club will carry on its work by argument:

Alonzo Carter says he had fair weather up to Tuesday, when a blow was encountered and the tog became thick. In the evening breakers were made out ahead and the fog settled very dense.

A short time after the vessel was found to be close on shore. It was impossible to work off, and in a few minutes she struck. They subsequently learned that they were at Gunning Rock, Betty Island, immediately under the righthouse of Prospect and very near the place of the great wreck of the steamer Atlantic.
